Martin-Bowser

James H. Martin of Altoona and Miss May E. Bowser were united in marriage at noon Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Bowser, in Osterburg.

Rev. H. W. Bender of Schellsburg performed the ceremony in the presence of about fifty guests. Miss Pearl Meyers of Mann's Choice was bridesmaid and Mr. Kerr of Norfolk, Va., best man.

They left the same afternoon on a wedding trip to Baltimore, Washington and Atlantic City, after which they will reside in Altoona.

The groom is a traveling salesman and is well and favorably known. The bride is well known and held in high esteem by many friends.

Mrs. Fred Palmer

Mrs. Bessie (Penrose), wife of Fred Palmer, was found dead in bed at the home of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Elijah Palmer, in Everett Friday morning, June 21. Her home was in Philadelphia, but at the time of her death she was visiting in Everett. She was a daughter of J. W. Penrose of this place and was aged about 30 years. Besides her father, one sister, Miss Lulu V. Penrose, of Philadelphia survives. Tuberculosis was the cause of her death.

The funeral services were conducted on Sunday by Rev. Illingsworth, pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church. Interment was made in the Everett Cemetery.

Mrs. John F. Long

Mrs. Ella Louisa Long, daughter of Jacob P. and Catharine Hillegass, and wife of John F. Long, passed away suddenly at her late residence, 6415 Deary Avenue, Pittsburgh, where she had resided for 22 years, Monday morning, June 17, in her 52nd year.

Funeral service was conducted at her home Tuesday evening by the pastor of Bethany Lutheran Church, of which she had been a consecrated member since 1890. Further service was held Thursday morning in the Reformed Church of Schellsburg, her native town, where interment was made.

Mrs. Long was married January 27, 1885, and is survived by her husband, her daughter, Mrs. Flora Myrtle Smith, one grandchild, four brothers and five sisters.

Mrs. Long was a good woman, humble and undemonstrative yet generous in disposition, kindly in spirit, a fond and loving wife and mother, almost indispensable in the home; a woman of exceptional beauty and strength of character, esteemed by her neighbors and friends for her genuine piety and high Christian life.

TAFT NOMINATED

At Chicaco Convention by Steam Roller Process.

ROOSEVELT WILL LEAD

Third Party in Fight for Chief Executive of Nation—Party Severed in Twain.

After the Republican National Convention had been in session five days at Chicago at 9:25 o'clock last Saturday night William Howard Taft was nominated to succeed himself as President of the United States and James S. Sherman was again chosen as his running mate.

The first and only ballot taken resulted as follows:

Taft	561
Roosevelt	107
La Follette	41
Cummins	17
Hughes	2

Three hundred forty-two delegates refused to vote and six were absent. Those refusing to vote were Roosevelt delegates who declined to participate because of the manner in which the roll was made up, which in their judgment and in the language of their chieftain, was "rank theft."

Roosevelt Nominated

At a mass meeting in Orchestra Hall on the same night Theodore Roosevelt was nominated by Progressive delegates to the Republican National Convention, pledged by the people to his support, who claimed they represented a large majority of the Republican voters of the entire country.

In accepting the nomination offered him by the Progressive delegates, Colonel Roosevelt declared that if the people want him—and it is claimed that the verdict in states where the people were allowed a voice in selecting delegates, together with the contest decisions of the reactionary Credentials and National Committees, demonstrates that they do—he will make the fight, even if it should result in securing the electoral vote of only one state.

Party Split

This is the first instance in the history of the Republican party of its having nominated two candidates for the high office of President of the United States.

AT THE SPRINGS

Season Promises to Break Records of Former Years.

Since the opening of the doors of Bedford Springs Hotel on June 15 there has been one continuous round of entertainment. The convention of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association was the largest in the history of that body and the side issues that week the golf and tennis tournaments, the ball game between the Eastern and Western bankers, the smoker, the vaudeville show, bridge parties, the bowling alleys and the swimming pool—furnished amusement in variety and abundance.

The new 18-hole golf course has been opened and is pronounced one of the finest in the country.

Motor parties are increasing in number as the season advances. The new state road from Pittsburgh to Bedford and the conveniences and amusements at The Springs added to the recognized medicinal properties of the waters account for the increased patronage of auto parties.

The magnesia spring is the centre of attraction during the early season.

A guest having traveled the hillside paths and followed the boundaries of the 3,000 acre estate, pronounced it the most beautiful spot in Pennsylvania and declared it does not suffer in comparison with any other watering place in the country and added, "And I have been at most of them."

On the back of an envelope found on the colonnade recently, addressed to a prominent Pittsburgher, the following was written:

"The springs flow from the mountain side;

They come from out the deep;

The air must come from heaven above

To produce such rest and sleep."

Ford Motorists Coming

A party of automobilists from Somerset and Somerset County, about one hundred in number, all in Fords, will come to Bedford on Sunday and spend a part of the day at The Springs. They will be met at the mountain west of Schellsburg by a party of Bedford motorists from here, headed by Blackwelder and Pepple, local agents for the Ford.

Misses Barnett Entertain

One of the most delightful social events of the season was the entertainment by Misses Helen and Hazel Barnett at Bedford Springs Hotel Wednesday night of a number of friends, in honor of their guests, Miss Katharine Street of Cumberland and Miss Ruth Cull of Oakland, Neb.

Others present were: Misses Margaret Cromwell, Helen Cessna, Rose Lutz, Louise Coveny and Edith Smith, and Messrs. Lawrence Gilchrist, Cloyd Doty, Ray Plank, Alexander Russell, Henderson Points, Neilson Horne, John and Philip Hughes and Joe F. Amos.

Pr'ce-Dibert.

Thursday afternoon of last week David C. Price and Miss Estella Dibert, of Imletown, were united in marriage by Rev. E. A. G. Hermann at the parsonage, Cessna.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION MENTIONED IN BRIEF

Representatives of the States of the Nation Now in Session in Baltimore Will Name the Next President of the United States

Judge Parker Selected as Temporary Chairman Over Bryan—The Keynote Speech—Ollie James Permanent Chairman—The Unit Rule Beaten—Combination of Two of Three

Factions Necessary to a Choice.

The drop of the gavel in the hand of National Chairman Norman E. Mack at 12:30 o'clock on Tuesday called to order the twenty-first National Convention of the Democratic party. The most important event of the session was the speech of Mr. Bryan nominating himself for temporary chairman against Judge Alton B. Parker, who had been selected by the National Committee, and his defeat by the vote of Parker, 579; Bryan, 506.

The Keynote Speech

At the evening session Temporary Chairman Parker delivered the keynote speech, which was a masterpiece and which necessarily had a harmonizing influence. He spoke of all the candidates as progressive, referred to the menace of a third term, discussed at some length the tariff and the trusts including campaign funds from trusts, and the President as a solicitor of funds, plead for the upholding of the Declaration and the Constitution, pointed out Republican misrule, saying in conclusion:

"What is our duty? To think alike as to men and measures. Impossible! Even for our great party! There is not a reactionary among us. All Democrats are progressives. But it is inevitably human that we shall not all agree that in a single highway is found the only road to progress, or each make the same man of all our worthy candidates his first choice."

"It is, however, our duty to put aside all selfishness, to consent cheerfully that the majority shall speak for each of us, and to march out of this convention shoulder to shoulder, intoning praises of our chosen leader—and that will be his due, whichever of the honorable and able men now claiming our attention be chosen."

At Wednesday's meeting Senator-elect Ollie M. James of Kentucky was unanimously chosen as permanent chairman of the convention. By agreement the taking up of the platform was deferred but it was agreed on all sides that it would be a progressive document.

The vote on the unit rule, which applied in this convention more particularly to Ohio than to any other state, resulted in 495 votes for and 565 against, 33 delegates being absent.

Yesterday's session was called to order at 12:40, with the hall being filled to its utmost capacity.

Work on the platform was begun at noon by Colonel Bryan and Senator O'Gorman as a sub-committee. Their draft was presented to the committee proper at 4 o'clock.

A number of ballots will likely be taken before a nomination is made.

The following statement made yesterday by Norman E. Mack is self-explanatory:

Baltimore, June 27.—Norman E. Mack this afternoon declared that there must be a combination of two of the diverging interests before the convention can make a nomination. He said: "As the convention now stands there are three conflicting elements. First, is the Wilson-Bryan element, known as radical progressives; second, the Clark element, containing both progressives and conservatives, and third, the Harmon-Underwood interests, the conservative element. Two of these elements will have to unite and there is no telling how or when this can be brought about. The means have not yet been found."

WILSON WILL BE NOMINATED

The following telegram was received last night at 7:18:

Baltimore, Md., June 27.

Gazette, Bedford.

All questions amicably settled; Wilson will be nominated beyond doubt.

A. Enfield.

BEDFORD'S BIG FOURTH

Program of Red Men's Celebration—A Good Time Assured.

The Red Men have about completed in detail their arrangements to carry out an attractive and interesting program at the Fair Grounds on Thursday, July 4. Word has been received that various tribes of Red Men, accompanied by many who are anxious to see this celebration, will come to Bedford on the Fourth. Following is the program:

10 a. m.—Parade of hundreds of Red Men in Indian costumes, ponies, bands, Company L, Eighth Regiment, and many attractive features, from depot via main streets of Bedford to Fair Grounds.

11 a. m.—Addresses.

12—Dinner on grounds.

1:30 p. m.—Reproduction of Custer's defeat—a sham battle between Custer and Company L, Eighth Regiment, against the Red Men.

2 p. m.—Baseball: Bedford vs. Altoona Lyceum Club.

2:45 p. m.—Trotting, pacing and Indian pony races.

Patriotic addresses.

Nine Indian Fiddlers; Indian dances; other amusements.

Sunset—Anniversary Council of Red Men around wigwams and camp fire.

The Red Men promise to give Bedford a spectacular parade that will surpass anything of its kind ever seen in the old historic town. Their buckskin costumes, feathers, paint, long hair and Indian weapons will present a marked contrast to the stately soldiers in their new uniforms, well trained in modern soldiery and under command of their proficient officers, Captain Metzger and his able lieutenants.

Custer will lead Company L against the Red Men. Skillful tactics have been planned by the opposing forces and Custer's defeat will be reproduced in amazing reality. Weapons, powder and shells will not be spared to produce the din of battle; however, care will be taken for the safety of the participants and the spectators.

Horse racing enthusiasts have taken charge of the trotting, pacing and Indian races. A large dancing platform will be erected upon which skilled Indian fiddlers will play.

Appropriate National Anniversary addresses will be made by speakers of the Grand Council of Red Men. The Improved Order of Red Men is patriotic in its origin and existence, the origin of which dates back to the Revolutionary War, when their sentiments along patriotic lines were voiced by the Boston Tea Party, and whose watchword has ever been Freedom.

The Altoona Lyceum Club is the strongest team in Altoona. Bedford will put a strong force against them. The entire day and evening will be

Seventh of a Series of Interesting Articles by

PROF. J. KIMBER GRIMM

Thy Geysers the Most Attractive of the Many Wonders of the Day's Journey in the Great Park.

There are a few legends connected with the Nez-Perces battlefield or Camp Cowan. Whether they be true stories is a question. A battle is said to have taken place here between the fierce Indian tribes and the whites, and a white man captured after being wounded. Stealthily, the Indians believing him too severely wounded to travel, the prisoner made his way on hands and knees to the U. S. camp and information given. Howard, a United States general, then set upon them with renewed vigor and exterminated that section of the tribe.

Whether this and the other stories be true or not, the spot is fascinating. Here we roved over acres of beautiful meadow land through which flows a stream as clear as nature could make it. Near us was a tall rock to the top of which we climbed and secured a vista of the immense pine forest that lay to the rear of our camp, which we were sure would afford superior hiding for the wild game of the Park. In this neighborhood we came to within less than a stone's throw of elk and ground-hogs galore. Even a bear came to visit our camp in his lazy style and created a good deal of amusement until our cook had allayed his ferocity with the flattering name of "Pete," and gave him his meal from a platter in hand, while we edged in as close as comfortable and secured a photo of the "gentle" creature calmly eating. After finishing his repast, he retired into the dense forest again, only to let an untold warning that camp strings bedied carefully to prevent a silent visit of one of his brothers by our cut during the night.

It was very cool that night. My partner related in the morning having heard a pack of coyotes while I slept, and after eating the morning meal, we hied off to the rock to see what more could be seen. Nothing but ground-hogs, three of which defiantly barked at us while we crept to within fifteen feet of them to take their pictures. Their mimicry in color of fur, made a photo rather weak in contrast, but we got one just the same.

"Chilled to the quick," we robed in all the extra clothing brought along, bathing suits and overcoats and soon found ourselves crowding close to the geysers in the Lower Geyser Basin. The weather, while it rained, snowed and sleeted, was rather a novelty for a July day, and we enjoyed it all.

While observing the action of an indicator near a geyser and at the same time warming up, we came close indeed to a shower from the suddenly erupting geyser. As we beat a hasty retreat, we came face to face with beautiful Larkspurs and Closed Gentians blooming in profusion. Then we thought it wise to remove the chill before mounting the wagon again and crept into the crater of a geyser. No disappointment experienced either. While the excessive heat within comforted us, the camera again took a proof of the position while it snowed without. Then we hurried to visit the Mammoth Paint Pots, a remarkable mud caldron about 40x60 feet and a mud rim four feet high, in which is a mass of fine whitish substance in a state of constant agitation. Numerous points of ebullition produced sounds like a coarsely whispered "plop, plop," which built cones two to three feet high of a pink and rosy color. Thirty or forty of these cones in varied colors reminded one of so many little volcanoes.

SEEING AMERICA

When we reached the Black Warrior geyser, little real idea of its true beauty could be discerned, the wind blowing a gale heavily laden with snow. The two blue flames in the "Fire Hole" were plainly visible, however, and explanation for the fire down in the water deep was lacking. The flames were there, and in the water; but how deep and what caused them was a mystery. The Raspberry, Dome and Great Fountain geysers were next visited and then we saw the steam rising from Hell's Half Acre. Cautiously, we all approached the rim of a dreadful, seething pit about 300 feet in diameter. Only when the breeze wafted the steam aside, could we see the deep blue tint of the "bottomless" mass of water. The walls of the caldron were almost perpendicular, but the depth to our eyes was very uncertain, although we guessed at twenty feet. It was still snowing. The scene amidst this combination of the elements was rare indeed. It is said that in activity, this powerful geyser (Excelsior) hurled rock by the ton as far as 500 feet from the crater, and the overflow of the water raised the Fire Hole River several inches.

How easy it would be to linger here and write and write and yet not do justice to the eye, the feelings, the rumblings, the sensations. The beauties of nature were here so plentiful Prismatic Lake, the largest body of hot water in the world, three-fourths of a mile in length, presented the most beautiful picture yet seen. It is impossible to exaggerate the richness and delicacy of the coloring. We were told that the temperature of the water was 145 degrees. Over the central pit the water was of a deep blue color. If it were not for notes taken, it would be impossible to give the location of the colors so variable, for in the shallower portions loomed up a yellow tint that gradually faded into orange. Outside the rim, was a brilliant red deposit which vanished into purples, browns and grays. The water flowed off in all directions down over a series of little terraces only a few inches in height. But the heart of the geyser basin region was now at hand, and much must be eliminated in our short story, regardless of the temptation to merely mention the seven attractions that we passed before reaching camp. It was noon, Saturday, and that forenoon had covered but nine miles.

Upper Geyser Basin

This triangular area embraces about four square miles, contains 26 geysers, and upwards of 400 hot springs. The main Fire Hole River drains it. Its shelving banks are studded with steaming hot springs. Round the area is a wavy line of dark confers that bounds the area containing the mightiest geysers known to man. In this region one is led to believe that Dante should have been, in order that he might have added another terror to his Inferno. One tourist said that it reminded him of a city having sunken amid flames into the bowels of the earth, and that the smoke of the ruins was still ascending through heaps of smoldering ashes. The traveler is led to believe that nothing has perished, however, except many pines, whose white covered trunks still stand in certain areas.

We camped beside the Riverside. In the opinion of the guide, this is a prettier geyser than the celebrated Old Faithful. After taking lunch, it began to rain and snow again, but yet we stood out near the bubbling Riverside, which seemed to be ready for a play. It kept us waiting long. To our surprise, many of the Shaw wagons had lined up in the storm to see the fun; and even a Concord Coach or two stopped for a few minutes for a similar reason. Soldiers

NOT THE ONLY ONE

There Are Other Bedford People Similarly Situated.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Bedford residents? After you have read the following, quietly answer the question.

George C. Stiffler, 302 W. Pitt St., Bedford, Pa., says: "The hardships I endured while serving in the Civil War disordered my kidneys. I often had to get up during the night to pass the kidney secretions and my back ached constantly. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly advertised, I procured a box and commenced taking them. It did not take them long to benefit me. Today I am in better health than I have been for years and I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit." (Statement given October 14, 1907.)

Re-Endorsement

Mr. Stiffler was again interviewed by our representative and he added to the above: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I did two years ago. I still use this remedy occasionally when my kidneys are not doing their work properly and I never fail to get benefit in a short time."

$3.50 RECIPE FREE, FOR WEAK MEN

Send Name and Address Today—You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow man to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest-acting restorative, upbuilding, SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 3584 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

grouped themselves as well, and silently led many an inquisitive and over enthusiastic observer back from the ravenous crater. "Keep back," was the warning. Suddenly the indicator overflowed and away went the water an hundred feet in the air, and as our "sheff" had told us, a noise was heard as that of 100 Comanche Indians. The sight was too beautiful, to hear the noise, or to pay little attention to it, and cameras were brought into play. Even though it snowed, we "shot" at the raving object from three sides, placing an abundance of hope and faith in the anastigmat that had taken views before under conditions almost as unfavorable. It played for at least ten minutes and then the steam vents and crater as well, puffed with fury, as if a locomotive were beneath forcing out steam at regular and short spaced intervals. Five minutes more and all was quiet.

A trip afoot was begun, that led us by the Grotto in full action, and six others that were at rest. We wandered slowly by the Rainbow Pool that deserved its name, and reached a little basin of bubbling water. This was named the Devil's Laundry, by our guide, who told a rather fascinating story of its action, and then to have us verify his statement, he requested us to hand over any laundry, and patronize quick service. Our members of the party were suspicious of a fraud, but finally several of us let down a handkerchief. Soon it disappeared. Anxious minutes passed; but no handkerchief appeared. Wager after wager arose among the members of the party, only to have the doubting Thomas beaten for as slowly as the kerchief disappeared, it reappeared whiter by far and cleaner than when we gave it. Compliments are due to Pluto, for his gratuitous work in the regions below. He did his work well and without pay. To those readers who doubt this story, we can only say—"Visit the Park."

A very interesting afternoon was spent among the variable wonders, white trees devoid of verdure, pools, geysers—Old Faithful, Beehive, Giantess, Bathub, Ear, Inkstand, Butterfly, Sponge, Lion, Lioness and Cubs, the Sawmill (which throws out raspberries on one side of its crater and lima beans on the other), Oyster, Turban, Grande, Economic and the Giant. The last mentioned wore the scars of violence. Its crater was not delicately shaped like those so near it, neither did it have the neat adornment worn by others. Its cone is ten feet high standing on a platform twenty-five yards in diameter. Due to its violence, at every play, when water rises 250 feet into the air, it tears away part of its formation, as it were, in rage. Three indicators are attached to it to warn of its gigantic displays.

HECKERMAN LETTER

Election of Democratic President is Predicted by "Dad."

Baltimore, Md., June 24.

The day is quite warm and the convention at Chicago with its great force has disbanded. Away down deep in my mind I wonder if all that the Republican leaders did out there was for the good of the country, as they seemed to think, by the thoughts given out by their yells and cat calls. Let it go as it will and you and I can and will live through it all so far as business goes. A Democratic President we will have and don't you forget it, says Dad.

Many people living here in the city have relatives in the country and it is a caution how these relatives impose on their city relatives. This does not only apply to the city and country relatives, but it applies to many. Why I have known a whole family of father, mother and four children go to town or city to see their relatives. This family has stayed for two days and brought to their city relatives a quart of apple-butter as a present. These country folks always take their appetites with them. This is even worse than the man who went to the preacher's to be married. He was married, stayed for dinner and then said to the minister, "I am a little short today, but when we thresh I'll remember you," and he did by bringing the minister a bushel of oats. Oats at that time was worth eighteen cents a bushel.

Now here is a true example of the above assertion. A week ago there was a rap at the door (could not see the push button), Aunt Venie opened the door and there stood Fred, a tall, six-footer, lank and lean, looking as if he had not eaten a bite in a week. "How do you do, Aunt." "Oh, very well; come in." Not having washed for many hours he was told to go into the bathroom and wash whilst aunt said she would get him some supper, as hers was over and the dishes washed and put away. Fred said, "Oh, never mind, I am not very hungry." Still aunt got him a very nice supper and whilst he was eating he said that having an annual pass on the P. R. R. he thought he would lose a day's work and ride some, and the evening before he packed a big box of lunch. After he ate all he could he took the train for Washington about 9. The next morning as he got to the city he thought, "I don't want to peddle that lunch around with me, I am here on a sight-seeing trip," so he got off in one corner of the big waiting-room of the Union depot and, by George, he ate all he had, thinking he could carry it on the inside better than on the outside. Then he started out and chased all day not stopping long enough to eat anything. Aunt said, "Then you have had nothing to eat since you ate that lunch in the depot this morning." "Not a bite and yet I am not very hungry. Oh! I forgot to tell you that Nell and the two oldest girls are coming down tomorrow and we are going to Wanamaker's shopping. See they got passes and will start tonight at 10 o'clock and they will bring lunch along for themselves and me too. I will meet them at the station at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning and we will all go to Wanamaker's to see and we may buy a few things to take up for the other children. You see I got passes for all and it don't cost 'nuffin'." After eating heartily he felt better though very tired. Now auntie and her husband lived in a neat, three-roomed apartment and as few of these city folks have spare rooms, she made a bed on the couch for her nephew and he slept soundly till 6, when he was awakened and told of the hour. He was scared saying, "Nell and the kids were due at 5 o'clock," but he added, "they don't know nobody and they have too much sense to run out." He had some breakfast and then started for the station, which was about two miles distant, expecting to find his Nellie and the two girls. This he did about 9 o'clock. They had in turn done just as he had, eaten all their lunch for breakfast and were lamenting about what they would get to eat for dinner and supper, when all at once it flashed before the mother that they would go up and stay at aunt's. Well they went to Wanamaker's sight seeing and that poor mother saw and coveted more things that day than in all her life and when evening came, Fred, Nellie and the two half grown girls hid themselves up to aunt's to stay with her and be fed, little thinking that aunt was not blessed with a bountiful supply of cash or room in which to entertain any one, much less a crowd like this. Her kitchen is six by eight and in this kitchen is her gas range and where she must cook and eat. Well these folks stayed two days and when about to leave, said: "Now aunt don't forget the baby is called after you and the dear child is two years old July 1st." Did not even say, "Thank you, come to see us," or make any remarks at all. I could cite you many cases just like it. All of which goes to show how inconsiderate some folks are.

Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

BALDHEADS

More Women are Bald Than Men, Says Authority.

This is a startling statement but it's true according to an article published in a standard magazine this year.

One thing is certain PARISIAN SAGE will surely prevent baldness by stopping the hair from falling, but it won't grow hair after the head is bald.

Ladies, look after your hair, destroy the dandruff germs with PARISIAN SAGE and dandruff will disappear. It stops scalp itch over night and is guaranteed to be the most refreshing, refined and agreeable hair dressing that can be obtained. Sold by F. W. Jordan and druggists all over America for 50 cents.

"My hair was falling out, and I was clogged up, are inflamed or congested no benefit until I tried PARISIAN SAGE."—Mrs. George Thunder, R. F. D. 5, Marshall, Mich.

The July Woman's Home Companion

An interesting feature of the July Woman's Home Companion is an article entitled "The Fatal Penny" by Mary Heaton Vorse, in which the author reports many startling facts about the dangers that children undergo who buy cheap candy, cheap ice cream, and other impure sweets sold to youngsters for one cent.

In the same number appear the letters descriptive of vacations which won prizes in the "Real Vacation" contest.

Other interesting contributions to the July Companion are: "The Spiritual Message of Nature," a sermon by Dr. Charles E. Jefferson of Broadway Tabernacle; "The Friendly Summer Trees" by Frank A. Waugh of the Massachusetts Agricultural College; "Tempting Hot-Weather Dishes" by Fannie Merritt Farmer; "Summer Time Books" by Jeannette L. Gilder, and a number of valuable articles in the regular Household, Fashion, Home Decoration and other departments.

The principal contributors of fiction are: Kathleen Norris, Eleanor H. Porter, Frederick M. Smith, Mary Brecht Pulver and Mary Heaton Vorse.

Old at Three Years of Age.

If men lived on Saturn they would be old at three years of age. Saturn's year is nearly 30 of ours in length. That is because it is 870,000,000 miles from the sun, consequently more time is required for it to complete a circuit of its orbit.

Daffodils

Little children of the sun,
Careless of oblivion,
Kindred to the quickened clod,
Not without some hint of God,
So content with your employ,—
Just to bloom with vernal joy,
Just to voice the golden mirth
Never dying in the earth,—
Would I might bequeath like you,
Who must fade as blossoms do,
When I pass into the night,
Some of your blessed warmth and light!

YOUR KIDNEYS NEED CLEANING

Every Person, Healthy or Unhealthy, Ought to Give the Kidneys a Thorough Cleaning Right Now.

You clean your teeth daily. You wouldn't think of doing otherwise, and yet the teeth are not one-tenth so important to health, strength and a long life as the kidneys.

Do you know that the kidneys are little strainers or fine sieves, through which every drop of blood in the body passes again and again?

And when the kidneys become clogged they are unable to strain the impure matter from the blood, and it stays in the blood and causes disease in various parts of the body. Take rheumatism, for instance, this terrible disease is caused by uric acid in the blood, and uric acid gets into the blood only when the kidneys are clogged up and are unable to properly strain the impurities.

Just go to Ed. D. Heckerman today and get a bottle of Thompson's Barosma, the most scientific kidney, liver and bladder regulator the world has ever known, take it regularly for two weeks, and all the impure matter in your kidneys will pass out through the bladder, and your kidneys will be as pure and clean and healthy as any kidneys can be.

Thompson's Barosma is guaranteed by Ed. D. Heckerman to cure all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder, or money back. It is a wonderful tonic and blood purifier, and will bring the glow of health to the cheeks of the sick in a short time. 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

A Doctor's Start

By CUTHBERT BROWN

Dr. Forbes Robinson when I was a medical student was to me a wonder of medical knowledge and skill.

"Doctor," I said to the great practitioner, "what especial talent gave you your present position at the head of your profession? Was it an ability to diagnose cases, a knack for handling cases or a knowledge of the nature of disease?"

The doctor looked out of a window with a comical expression on his face. "Come, tell me. I know it was not luck."

"Not exactly."
"Well?"
"It was principally stupidity."
"Nonsense."

"There's always a turning point in every man's career. I practiced for ten years before that turning point came. Before that I was driven from place to place by being some patient whose case I couldn't make out or perhaps blundering. In the last town I left from such a cause I had got fairly well started. Then a small boy was brought to me with a broken arm. I treated him for a sprained wrist for three weeks, when his mother discovered the break. That ruined me for that place. At any rate I left."

"I came from there here, and for several years I was in a chronic state of starvation. One evening I didn't feel very well and thought I would take a dose I fixed for myself. By mistake I got hold of the wrong bottle and took a big dose of laudanum. I didn't know of it till I had got the stuff down, and even then I wasn't sure. I was wondering what I'd better do when a carriage was driven up to my door by a coachman in livery. A hand somely dressed young lady jumped out, hurried up the steps and pulled the bell violently. I ran down stairs, and she gasped:

"You a doctor? Come quick. Father is dying."

"I ran back for my bag of medicines, then got into the carriage with the young lady and was driven to her home. I was beginning to grow stupid, or I would have asked the girl for the patient's symptoms. All the thinking I did was about myself, for I suspected that I had swallowed poison. As soon as I got to the house I asked for a pitcher of water, drank a tumblerful to dilute the stuff in my stomach and went upstairs to the patient. He was in great agony and was holding on to his stomach with both hands. I concluded his trouble was acute dyspepsia and, opening my bag, I attempted to get hold of a remedy for that trouble.

"I was by this time so far gone with my own trouble that I was unable to get the bottle I used back into its place in my satchel, so I dropped it on the bottom. I was sufficiently conscious to know that I must keep moving and drink water. So I called for it, intimating that I wanted it for the patient, and when it came for every glass I drank myself I gave him one.

"He stopped groaning and, closing his eyes, was going to sleep when it occurred to me that something might have gone wrong. Instinctively I dived down into my satchel and pulled out the bottle that had contained the dose I had given him. Great heavens! It was labeled laudanum.

"Without explaining to those in the room, I got the patient out of bed—he was in his shirt—and began to walk him back and forth. Every few minutes I would stop at the water pitcher and pour some water down his throat. Meanwhile I was gradually recovering from the effects of my own dose and getting back my wits.

"The family, seeing the two of us staggering to and fro in the sick chamber, were nonplussed. They kept firing questions at me, to which I paid no attention. This frightened them all the more, and they made such an ado that I ordered them all out of the room.

"I walked the patient till I could see that he had recovered from the effects of the poison, then told the family to keep him awake for another two hours and left him. I went home, took a drug that I knew would brace me and later went back to see how my patient was getting on. I found him sitting up and looking fairly well.

"What was the trouble, doctor?" asked his wife.

"It was the— I was trying to think of some ailment with a name that would puzzle them and not commit me when the patient forestalled me.

"I know what it was," he said. "It was the lobster."

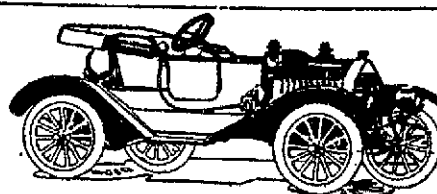

"But why did you walk him back and forth?" asked the lady.

"Why, you see," I replied, "the lobster was decayed and poisoned him. I was obliged to give him a powerful antidote, which deadened the pain; but, being a narcotic as well as a dangerous one at that, had I let him go to sleep he would have died."

"Isn't it wonderful," exclaimed the woman, "how much the doctors know?"

"The whole family considered that had it not been for my drastic treatment the patient would have been lost, and they spread my fame far and wide. They had a large circle of acquaintances and sounded my praise everywhere. There are persons who when they recommend a doctor or a remedy are offended if their advice is not accepted. This family was one of that kind. Having recommended me, they frowned on all who would not employ me.

"That was my start, and I have been growing in favor ever since."

The preparation mentioned by the Rev. Chas. Mr. C. A. ABBOTT, August 12, 1905.

60 Ann St., New York City.

Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Biotin) in cases of pulmonary troubles. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of; that 40 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. My physician said I was a consumptive and my family physician told me that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson's Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly,

REV. CHAS. SAGER,

Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.), N. Y.

The above letter shows what a great boon the Wilson Remedy was to Mr. Sager, but it is but one of thousands received testifying to the curative powers of this wonderful remedy. Write at once to Mr. Abbott at the above address and he will furnish you convincing proof of the great worth to humanity of this preparation.

POMONA GRANGE MEETINGS

Held in Hall of Bedford Grange Near Cessna.

The regular Quarterly Meeting of Pomona Grange No. 24 of Bedford County was held with Bedford Grange No. 619 in their hall near Cessna on Thursday, June 13. The address of welcome was given by S. U. Troutman and was responded to by A. C. Richards of New Paris. Reports from all the subordinate Granges except two were received, showing most of them to be in good working order with increasing membership.

Insurance Director George W. Oster gave a very interesting report of the Bedford County Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Company, showing the company to be in a good, healthy condition. Notwithstanding the fact that there were two losses by fire this year, aggregating $1,750, it had money enough on hand to pay them cash, without depleting the treasury. This company was organized February 15, 1909, and is conducted on an economical basis. Officers, agents and all connected in any way with the company, do their work on small salaries, thus lessening the cost of insurance for its patrons. The company invites all Bedford County people to come and share this cheap insurance with them. For particulars call or write the Secretary, George W. Oster, Osterburg.

Several important questions relative to the fire insurance business were discussed by a number of those interested in insurance. A committee of three was appointed to draft resolutions regarding excessive telephone charges and present them to the proper place for adjustment. A call was made from the Chair for a recess, and then the good people of Bedford Grange entertained the visitors in a very substantial way at their homes.

At 8:30 p. m. a public meeting was opened with music. Wilson Hissong then read an essay on "Rural Mail Delivery," which was very interesting as well as instructive. "How Can the Grange Assist in Upbuilding and Promoting a Rural Community and Make it a More Desirable Place in Which to Live" was ably discussed by a number of patrons. A. C. Richards gave a very interesting talk on general lines—"Adornment of Homes," "Profitable Business Methods," "Social Features of the Home," "Educational Meetings," "Helping the Schools in Practical Agriculture," and "Other Agencies to Help Keep Our Boys and Girls on the Farm."

This Pomona, or County Grange meeting, was very well attended and more than ordinary interest manifested throughout all sessions. We are led to believe that even old Bedford County will soon wake up and join the enthusiastic throng that is striving earnestly for that which they so justly deserve—Equalization of Taxation. Just why the farmer should pay about 16 mills on the dollar for taxes and corporations only about 3 1/2 mills is a little beyond our ability to figure out.

Pomona Grange will meet with Charlesville Grange in October. May the interest shown at Cessna continue to grow and place Bedford County in the front ranks of agriculture and horticulture, where it rightfully belongs.

After passing a resolution of thanks to Bedford Grange for their hospitality, Pomona Grange closed in regular form.

C. L. King,
Secretary.

Shakespeare's Tragedies.

Whenever "Macbeth" is put upon the stage very nearly a fourth of it has to be omitted, for, although it is the shortest of the tragedies, it would take fully three hours to read it out loud without gabbling. "Hamlet" thus read would take nearly two hours more and this seems to bear out the contention of Swinburne, among others, that much of the play, and, indeed, of other tragedies, was written by Shakespeare for the study and not for the stage. A six or seven hours performance must have been too much even for an audience of Elizabeth's spacious times.—London Graphic.

Children's Day Exercises

The Children's Day exercises given in the Church of the Brethren at Riddlesburg Sunday night, June 16, under the directions of Mrs. Bess Lundquist, assisted by Mrs. Lear and Mrs. Harclerode, were well rendered and appreciated by a crowded house of visitors.

The decorations were simple but nevertheless beautiful and in keeping with the spirit of the service. Every part from the simple little verse to the difficult drill exercise was performed without a break, and although the exercises lasted for one hour and forty-five minutes, the order and the attention was splendid throughout. We certainly would like to call attention to every number of the program but shall be obliged to mention only a few of the specially attractive features of the exercises.

The exercises were opened with a hymn entitled "The Sunday School Band," followed by the Lord's Prayer repeated by the entire audience. The Welcome Greeting was given by Eva Harclerode. Three small boys dressed in yellow uniforms gave an exercise entitled "The Dandelions," which was followed by a most delightful motion song entitled "We'll Mind the Rule in Sunday School." Another very interesting and well delivered song entitled "Very Little Tots" was sung by about 20 very little "tots." Marguerite Lear and Emma Zimmerman each sang a solo, Arveda Harclerode and Emma Zimmerman sang a duet, and Misses Orpha Worthing, Adda Zimmerman and Myrtle Zimmerman sang a trio entitled "Would You Dwell in Beautiful Sunshine." Some of the recitations remembered by the writer were "Flowers for Children's Day" by three of the "little tots"; "Dolly's Time to Speak a Piece" by Olive Oaks, "The Children of Japan" by Ruth Weyant, "If You Have a Message" by Virginia Lear, and "Listen to Your Mother" by Pearl Eltman. A recitation entitled "If We Knew" was given by Hedda Thorsen, while Master Martin Oaks recited a humorous little piece entitled "Almost a Man."

Among the most beautiful and impressive drills and exercises were "All Hail the Queen of Children's Day," "At the Window," consisting of songs and recitations, a Rose Dumb-bell Drill, "Nature's Clock," "Strewing Blossoms," "Little Plants Like Sleepy Heads," a motion song, and "Ten Little Sun Flowers." In this last exercise each of the ten children stepped upon the platform, recited a verse, passed behind a canvas which was decorated to represent sunflower petals. In the center of each sunflower there was a hole through which a child showed its face, giving the appearance of a sunflower in full bloom.

W. W. Willard, pastor of the Methodist Church at Riddlesburg, was present and contributed to the exercise with a few well chosen remarks and, after the singing of a hymn, dismissed the meeting with the Benediction. This was in a sense a union meeting since quite a number of those who helped to make the meeting a success were members of the Methodist Sunday School, and to show the kindly feeling existing between the two schools, the Superintendent of the Sunday School and the minister of the Methodist Church postponed all their services for the evening and attended the exercises in the Church of the Brethren. This certainly shows a Christian spirit which is to be commended and it is to be hoped that this meeting will result in much good to the village of Riddlesburg. May God bless the work of His glory.

Books of Youth.

The books that affirmed us in youth recall the delight ever afterwards; we are hardly persuaded there are any like them, any deserving equally our affections. Fortunate if the best fall in our way during this susceptible and forming periods of our lives.—Alcott.

"The New Suburb" number of Scribner's Magazine (July) reveals the widespread movement to solve the problem of modern living, intelligently, scientifically, and economically. England has been the forerunner in this movement and Frederic C. Howe, lately elected President of the People's Institute in New York, describes "The Garden Cities of England." It will be a revelation to American readers to know the advance made along this plan of constructing beautiful suburbs at such places as Letchworth, Hampstead, and Bournville; and all are designed, not as speculations, but to give the owners of houses in the suburbs the advantage of beautiful planning of public spaces for air and health, and of the increased value of adjacent lands; in other words, the unearned increment goes to the general good.

The July American Magazine. The leading feature in the July American Magazine is a new story by Rudyard Kipling entitled "The Benefactors." It is a story founded on the coal strike in England and is interesting because it presents with great power the reactionary's view of the thing. It is really a warning to labor. A remarkable article in this issue of the magazine is the story of Carola Woerishoffer by Ida M. Tarbell. Carola Woerishoffer was a rich New York girl who declined to live a life of luxury, and threw herself into certain useful activities with resultant interesting experiences and adventures which Miss Tarbell describes intimately and entertainingly. Ray Stannard Baker, Senator La Follette, Walter Prichard Eaton and Hugh S. Fullerton contribute other articles. Notable fiction is contributed by Kathleen Norris, Olive Higgins Prouty, Juliet Wilbor Tompkins and H. G. Wells.

Abe Martin, Indiana's funny man, writes a piece about the old-fashioned Fourth of July, and F. P. Dunne writes an amazingly able and moving editorial on the Titanic disaster.

How to Purify a Well

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside, Dr. R. E. Buchanan, of the Department of Bacteriology of Iowa State College, tells how to purify a stone or brick well that has not had water drawn from it for several years and has perhaps become stagnant. He says:

"Pump out all the water, and scrub the walls thoroughly with a stiff brush. Then place in the well one pound of copper sulphate for every one thousand gallons of water. Allow the well to stand until it fills near the original depth; 24 hours, at least. Then pump out the water and that which runs in on the day following. "Lime may be used instead of copper sulphate, but is not so good. Copper sulphate may be added to the scrub-water, though this would not be absolutely necessary."

THE GREAT ISSUE

The dividing line between the two great political parties is the tariff and, naturally following, the trusts, the children of the tariff. The tariff was the central feature of the keynote speech delivered by Judge Alton B. Parker, Temporary Chairman of the Democratic National Convention, at Baltimore on Tuesday. It is a great issue.

A tariff duty was placed on articles manufactured abroad in the early days of the republic as a protection to our "infant industries," but the combinations of capital that came into control of those "infants," seeing the advantage to them of the duty, were not willing to have it discontinued as those infants grew, nor are they willing now to allow it to be even lowered, though our industries have grown to exceed those of any other country in the world.

The Republican party, the party selected during the last half century to do the bidding of The Interests, has steadfastly held up and in many instances increased the rate while the Democratic party has steadily endeavored to reduce the rate and thus reduce the cost of living to the consumer.

Surely the time has come to reduce the tariff to a revenue basis all along the line and to remove it entirely from the necessities of life and from all raw materials and many other articles that need no protection.

The $130,000,000,000 of wealth of which we boast, almost twice the wealth of Great Britain and Ireland, and more than twice as great as that of either France or Germany, is in the hands of the few, "The Interests," and all because of the working of the tariff concerning which the plain people have been so long deluded by the spellbinders of the party whose campaign funds have been contributed by "The Interests" and for which "The Interests" have driven their employees to the polls to vote like cattle.

But times have changed and the working classes are thinking for themselves.

Realizing this fact four years ago, in order to hold the vote for Taft, the Republican platform promised a revision; but after the election duties were raised rather than lowered, and this more than any other one thing is responsible for the severing of that organization.

The true progressive of today—call him progressive or reactionary as you please—is he who would return to that state in National conditions in which the plain people have an equal chance; he would revise downward the robber tariff—higher today by 12½ per cent. than in war times—and reduce the cost of living; he would eliminate graft, and unnecessary expense, and special privileges, and discriminations; he would put the government on a business basis; he would "establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense and promote the general welfare."

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

The following from the speech of Hon. Elihu Root, Temporary Chairman of the Republican National Convention, is worthy of notice:

"We will keep the covenant that our fathers made, and that we have reaffirmed from generation to generation, between the whole body of the people and every individual under national jurisdiction."

Taken at its face value the above utterance has a noble ring and would be sufficient platform in itself for a political party, but coming from one who is now so bitterly denounced by the progressive wing of his party as a tool of "the interests" it loses its force and its significance. Is it but a flight of oratory, a beautiful rhetorical figure?

"We will keep the covenant" would have so much more force if the speaker could have added "as we have kept it in the past." But alas, such a declaration he, a member of the party which has kept up the tariff and fostered trusts, could not claim! True he says "that we have reaffirmed from generation to generation," but here is the trouble; too frequently have pledges been made only to be broken, have affirmations and re-affirmations been made only to be forgotten until the next campaign, when votes were again needed. For years the Democratic party has distrusted the declarations of the leaders and the bosses of the party of high tariffs and trusts, and now numbers of Republicans, perhaps more than a majority, are thinking for themselves and have pierced the threadbare promises and pledges and will no longer stand for their party's attitude of favoring trusts and combines at the expense of those who work with their hands and honorably earn their bread.

But four years ago the Republican candidate for President and the campaign orators made, throughout all the states of the Union, the promise of tariff revision downward and reduction in the cost of living, which the administration utterly failed to do. Was the Root statement made in good faith or merely for the purpose of influencing delegates? Does his party really mean to "keep the covenant," or does it mean to break it? Will history repeat itself?

The American people, more and more as the years pass, are coming to "judge the future by the past."

Mrs. F. E. Baker

Mrs. F. E. Baker died at her home near Coopersville, Ottawa County, Mich., on June 15, 1912, of acute indigestion, aged 58 years, 10 months and 13 days. A complication of other diseases had been stealthily undermining her for some time but she was able to go around and attend to her home duties. Her sudden death was a shock to her many friends. She was sick only several hours, suffering intensely; rallied a little and suddenly grew worse. Loved ones had gathered at her bedside to catch a parting word from her lips but the heart had ceased to beat. She seemed to realize she was dying; during the final attack she pressed her youngest daughter to her side and said, "Goodbye, Faye."

Lottie Miller was born at the Arnold home, near Buffalo Mills, Bedford County, Pa., August 2, 1853. She was the second daughter of Jacob Studebaker Miller and Eleanor Arnold Miller. Her father died several months before she was born, her mother, afterwards Mrs. Daniel Earnest, lived until January 1902.

After attending common school, and select school at Buffalo Mills and Mann's Choice, she attended the Bedford Normal School which was a large central school at that time. She attended school and taught in different parts of the county from 1870 until the autumn of 1875 when she married Fillmore E. Baker of Milligan's Cove, where they lived until the spring of 1888, when they moved to near Manassas, Va., where they lived until the autumn of 1902 when they moved to Michigan. Mrs. Baker is survived by her husband and eleven children. Her only full sister, Mrs. E. A. Replogle of Huntingdon, her half sister and brother, Mrs. D. T. Dibert of Kittanning Point, Frank Earnest of Huntingdon and Harry of Altoona, attended the funeral.

She was laid to rest in a pretty cemetery several miles from her home. Everybody loved her and beautiful flowers came from the Aid Society, the Sunday School Adult Class, from the temperance workers and the Sunday School children, whose superintendent and teacher she was. Several ministers of the Congregational Church conducted the services at the house, the church and the grave. An Englishman, Mr. Fynch, spoke to a large and sympathetic audience from the words "She hath done what she could," paying the greatest tribute to noble motherhood and to her as a mother in her home, and in the community, among the needy and in all departments of Christian work.

Children's Service

The Church of God Sunday School of Saxton held a very interesting children's service last Sunday evening. Various recitations and songs were given by the large primary class and a very excellent drill by ten girls of the intermediate classes. The music was rendered by the choir and male chorus and was very inspiring. A large crowd was present and the offering lifted for Findlay College was the largest lifted for some time. James Blackburn is superintendent of the school which is one of the largest in Bedford County. The school numbered 231 on Sunday morning.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock a beautiful wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Blankley, of Clearville, when their second daughter, Miss Irene V., was united in marriage to Harry G. Miller. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. G. Hetrick of the Reformed Church in the presence of thirty-five guests. Albert Shipley was best man and the bride's sister, Miss Ada E. Blankley, was bridesmaid. The bride carries a beautiful bouquet of roses. Immediately after the ceremony a most bountiful wedding dinner was served. The young couple received quite a lot of useful and valuable presents.

The groom is a son of William H. Miller of Chapman's Run and is an industrious young man. The bride is the well-known Clearville "central phone" girl of the Bedford Fulton line. They will start on Monday on a trip to Illinois and through the west.

A TEN YEARS' INTERVAL

By EMILY J. ARMSBY

The time had come for the meeting of a class of graduates of the Naval academy at Annapolis of ten years before. A lieutenant who had just arrived stood on a certain spot on the parade ground in a contemplative mood. A lady leading a little girl by the hand came along a walk.

"I beg pardon," said the lieutenant, lifting his cap. "Can you tell me if Professor D. still occupies a chair at the academy?"

"He does."

"I am a member of the class of 190— I studied under Professor D. and had a great admiration for him."

He waited for the lady to say something more, but she did not seem inclined to do so. He continued:

"Professor D. had a lovely daughter, Alice. Is she still living?"

"She is."

"H'm!" He gazed on vacancy. Evidently he had returned to his cadet days and some especial memory.

"I knew Miss Alice D.," he resumed presently. "She was a lovely girl."

"She is an especial friend of mine."

She told me once that she was engaged to a cadet who graduated about your time, possibly of your class."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. He sailed for the east after leaving here and did not return."

"Surely he wrote to her?"

"I believe he sent her a letter or two, but that ended the correspondence."

"Dropped by the lady, I presume. We naval men are noted for our constancy."

"If having a sweetheart in every port is constancy then you are all models of faithfulness."

"I cannot conceive a member of my class—they were all honorable fellows—disregarding his plighted troth."

"There were some of them I can't conceive of regarding it. I was a young lady when your class graduated, and I knew many of its members."

"One of us you wrong. That I know myself."

"Yes. I loved a girl attached to the academy, her father being a member of the academic staff."

"Professors' daughters form excellent material for cadets to practice making love upon."

"You speak in irony. I parted from the girl I loved the night before I sailed right here where we are standing. The moon was at the full and shone down through the leaves, patches of light quivering upon the grass on which we stood. We vowed eternal constancy. It seemed at parting that I could not let go her hand. At last I tore myself away and the next day began the wandering of a naval officer."

He bowed his head, then finished in a trembling voice, "Alas, when I returned a few years later to America I heard that she had married another."

"Alice told me all about it."

"Alice?"

"Yes. You had not been long in Japan when a cruiser returned from there bearing an officer who had met you in Tokyo. Alice met him in Washington. He knew nothing of your engagement to her and told of two affairs of yours at the capital of Japan."

"And Alice believed these stories?"

"Others told them as well."

"I swear!"

"By the inconstant moon, or, rather, don't swear at all. You are absolved from all blame. There is some incongruousness in a midshipman of twenty keeping faith with his first sweetheart. Besides, you have gained rather than lost. Alice is now thirty. You would not recognize in the woman nearly middle aged the girl of nineteen. You may still fit from flower to flower for another decade and then be young enough to pick a bud."

"I shall never love any woman except Alice."

"You would not recognize her if you should see her."

"I would know her among a thousand."

"Come and see me this evening and I will give you an opportunity to pick her out among half a dozen—the third house over there in the officers' quarters."

She passed on, leaving the lieutenant uneasy. He could not remember very well how Alice D. had looked as a girl. Now that she was ten years older to recognize her would be difficult. Nevertheless the officers of the United States navy are used to standing by their guns in more than one respect. He called on the lady he had met and found five other women of ages between eighteen and thirty. He entered the room, casting furtive glances on those assembled. They were all in the secret and on the quiver of expectation. He was presented to them all, but none of their names was spoken.

"And now," said the hostess, "the girl you parted with ten years ago stands before you. Choose her."

The lieutenant thought of the Indian ocean and wished he was riding on its billows. He scrutinized them all, growing the while very red, and at last concluded to risk a choice in a lady of twenty-five.

It was received with a burst of laughter.

"I am Alice," said the hostess, "and permit me to say that you are the most unmitigated bumpkin I have ever known."

An officer entered the room whom she introduced as her husband, a lieutenant commander.

LANDED A BIG FISH.

Then He Hooked Bigger Game and Had an Exciting Time.

A singular fish story is told in the East Indian papers. A fisherman started for the river, accompanied by a shikari, carrying a rifle for use in case of an encounter with big game. The fisherman in a short time landed a large fish and then moved up stream to another pool. On his way he passed a ravine and caught sight of an enormous tiger.

In a panic the fisherman concealed himself behind a pile of rocks and was flustering himself that he had escaped observation when the fish fell from his hands in full view of the tiger.

The fish was floundering in the road, and the tiger instantly pounced on it and carried it off. But the hook still held, and as soon as the tiger felt the resistance of the line he gave his head an impatient shake, which resulted in the harpooning of his upper lip.

At this critical moment the enraged animal saw the crouching fisherman, who was totally unnerved by his dangerous position, and actually began to play the tiger as he would a fish.

The tiger stopped for a moment in apparent amazement at such audacity, and in that instant the shikari came on the scene with his rifle and sent a bullet through the brute's brain.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FRENCH TOBACCO TESTERS.

Men Who Find Smoking Anything but an Agreeable Task.

The French government's official tasters of tobacco form a category of civil servants of whose activity little is known outside their own department.

Tobacco is a state monopoly in France, and these experts are employed under the ministry of finance to report on all classes of tobacco that are permitted to be sold in France. The men are mostly supernumerary inspectors of tobacco factories.

Their hours of business are from 9 to 5. As a rule, it is the lower grades of tobacco that need the most careful attention. They have to report not only on the cigars, cigarettes and pipe tobaccos put on the market by the French Tobacco Regie, but also on all imported tobacco.

Smoking when compulsory is anything but an agreeable duty, these employees say. They are in constant danger from ill caused by the excessive use of tobacco, and they combat these by taking large quantities of black coffee, which is also said to assist them to differentiate between the various kinds of tobacco on which they have to give their opinion.—Exchange.

How Seeds Travel.

They have been discovering some extraordinary plants in England, plants which puzzled the botanists, to whom they were either utterly unknown or known as growing only in far distant lands. One naturalist picked on the grounds of the Bradford sewage works 160 species of foreign plants. Among these were several Australian burrs, Jimson weed, prickly poppies from Mexico, others native to Peru, Siberia and the Azores. All were of a prickly nature. Investigation proved that the dust from wool combing establishments was being used as fertilizer and the washings of wool were run into the sewers. The burrs of these foreign plants had come in the wool and had grown. Other plants had sprung from seed in rags and others being brought in soil on foreign timber.—New York World.

Level of Two Seas.

When attention was first called to the practicability of a canal from the Mediterranean to the Red sea by the first Napoleon a corps of surveyors was sent out to "run the levels." They reported that the scheme would necessarily have to be abandoned because the level of the Red sea was thirty feet six and a half inches higher than that of the Mediterranean. That report put a damper on the canal project for several years. In 1847, however, some "doubting Thomases" prevailed on the great powers to resurvey the route. England sent Robert Stephenson, Austria M. Talbot and France Signor Negrelli. They found that the two seas had exactly the same level, and the Suez canal was the result.

The Weight of the World.

A cubic foot of earth weighs about five and a half times as much as a cubic foot of water. A cubic mile of earth then weighs 25,094,300,000 tons. The volume of the earth is 259,880,000,000 cubic miles. The weight of the world without its atmosphere is 6,666,250,000,000,000,000 tons. If we add to this the weight of the atmosphere given above we get a grand total—6,666,255,810,000,000,000,000 tons.

She Used Them.

"Does your mother take an interest in your father's business?" asked the lady visitor.

"Indeed, she does," replied the boy feelingly.

"And what is your father's business?"

"He's in the shingle business."—Yonkers Statesman.

So He Did.

"Indians, you know," said the widely read man, "are very stoical. They're never known to laugh."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the flippant person. "The poet Longfellow made Minne-ha-ha."—Catholic Standard and Times.

The two powers which in my opinion constitute a wise man are those of bearing and forbearing.—Epictetus.

To a Careful Child Only.

In seeking instances of thrift superinduced by the exigencies of modern life, let the sociologist not overlook this advertisement: "For rent, to a careful child, by a family going to Egypt for six months, dolls' house completely furnished, four dolls included. Terms reasonable."

Censorship in Russia.

It is pleasant to learn—the story is current in many a Russian household—that the cookery books which had been condemned because a recipe contained the words "perfect freedom," words which were used in reference to some culinary process, have escaped further mutilation and have been selling without hindrance. On the other hand the list of books which continue to be suppressed is long and varied.

Responsibilities of Citizenship.

The duties of citizens are not fulfilled so long as there is a single hovel in a city; a man, woman, or child sweated, or a hungry, uncared-for child in their midst.—Exchange.

The Code Duello

A Story Showing How a Small Circumstance May Turn the Scale of Advantage

By ARNOLD D. EWING

A few years before the war between the states I was obliged to go from my northern home to South Carolina. I was sitting one evening in a cafe with a friend when a discussion arose at a table near me between an elderly man and one who was, at least by comparison, young. The latter had been sitting alone at the table when the former entered the cafe, stood at the entrance looking about him, then walked with a limp to where the other was sitting and, taking a chair, called for a julep. Neither spoke to the other, and it was evident they were strangers.

But presently the older man addressed a remark to the younger, which led to conversation. At that time the pro and anti slavery parties were contending, the one to make Kansas a free, the other a slave state. The man who had entered last began to inveigh against the "border ruffians," as they were called in the north, at the same time charging them with committing innumerable crimes. I was rather surprised at this, since he spoke with a distinct southern accent, though at that time the southern people were not united on the slavery question, indeed were not united even after the war commenced.

The younger man took issue with his neighbor, averring that the south had the right to carry their institutions into the new territories as well as the north. Whereupon the other became violent and abusive. The advocate of those who were trying to make Kansas a slave state endeavored to withdraw from the discussion, but his opponent would not permit him. Finally the latter, waxing wroth, declared that the proslavery movement in Kansas was conceived in iniquity and any man who advocated it was a scoundrel.

The other's cheek burned, but he controlled himself, whereupon his opponent, who was evidently disposed to drive him to the wall, said that a man who had such opinions and declined to defend them was a coward. This forced the younger man to resent the insult offered him, and, drawing a card from his pocket, he handed it to his insulter.

"I haven't a card with me, sub," said the challenged man, "but with you permission I will write my name on the back of yours. I will send a friend to you immediately to arrange a meeting at 4 o'clock tomorrow morning. I must leave the city at 6 on important business."

"And I, sir," replied the other, "have an important engagement in the early morning which will prevent my fighting you till later."

"If you mean, sub, to crawl out of the affair I should be glad to know it now," the gonaded man, seeing me and my friend sitting at another table witnessing this imputation on his courage, said coolly to his tormentor:

"Very well; since you wish to be killed before breakfast I will put off my other engagement and kill you. I will be at home for the rest of the evening, where I shall await the coming of your friend."

He arose from his chair and went out, leaving his opponent in possession of the field.

He had no sooner disappeared than the man who had provoked him beckoned to my friend Mortimer, who left me and went with him to an unoccupied corner of the room, and the two held a conference in a low tone. When it was over Mortimer returned to me and gave me a few words of explanation. He said that he was to be the second in the coming meeting of the man whom he had conferred with. Colonel Ringold. He had commanded a regiment of volunteers in the Mexican war, was a planter who owned slaves and a man of high standing in the community. Why he had provoked the man he had sat with—Jerrold was his name—Mortimer did not say.

I had a desire to see the end of what to me was a very singular affair, and, fortunately for my purpose, being a physician, Mortimer agreed to take me with him in the capacity of surgeon. Meanwhile I was to say nothing about the matter. Colonel Ringold had not given his true name, and his opponent did not know who he was. Since Mortimer and I were the only persons besides the principals and the colonel would stay at home until he went to the ground the secret was not likely to come out.

I confess I had been much prejudiced against Colonel Ringold for forcing a quarrel upon one who seemed an inoffensive man.

"You think Jerrold an inoffensive man, do you?" said Mortimer. "Well, I will tell you about him. He is one of those persons who grow up under the dueling system—it is rapidly dying out here in the south I am happy to say—who, having acquired great skill with arms, conceive a passion for making as many victims as possible. He can kill the colonel if he wishes to. As so, but I shall use diplomacy to induce him to be content to wing his enemy. There are but two persons who know why the colonel insulted him—the colonel and myself. Jerrold does not know it; you do not know it, and I shall not tell you till the affair is over. The probability is, however, that it will lead to another fight."

This fraction of a story left me more puzzled than before. Indeed, my curiosity was excited to such a pitch that I did not sleep a wink during the brief interval before the meeting. I was called at 3 in the morning by Mortimer and, with my case of surgical instruments, entered a carriage in waiting and drove to the ground.

The colonel was there, standing alone in the gray of the morning. It seemed to me that his expression indicated some special purpose, by which he was to meet a man who was considered invincible, he must have felt that death for him was almost certain. There was a far away look in his eye, such as a man might have who dreams to leave those he loves and who love him. While I had been prejudiced against him a few hours before, I now took him into my heart.

While I was regarding him a carriage rolled up and out stepped Jerrold and his second and his own surgeon. The colonel as the challenged party had chosen Derringer pistols, which were used at that time in duels. The seconds paced off the ground, and since it was long before sunrise and cloudy at that there was no toss up for choice of position. Colonel Ringold stood in one spot until his second placed him in the position from which he was to fight. It was but a few paces from where he stood, but I noticed when he took them the same limp was apparent as when he had entered the cafe the previous evening. Just before the first fire, when all was ready except to give the signal, Mortimer whispered in my ear:

"Whatever you discover keep it to yourself."

He then took a position midway between the two at the side and, holding a handkerchief in his hand, dropped it. Jerrold fired in the air; the colonel's bullet grazed his adversary's sleeve.

To my surprise—Mortimer did not appear to share it—the colonel called for another shot. The two were again placed in position, the signal given, and two shots rang out. Jerrold was unhurt; the colonel fell. I ran to him; but, getting up with difficulty, he motioned me to keep away. Standing as firmly as before, he called for a third shot.

If I was puzzled at seeing him fall and then get up, his antagonist was amazed. Not a drop of blood was to be seen, though his trousers were torn. When the two were standing waiting for the next signal I glanced at Jerrold and saw at once that something was the matter with him.

I have since thought that at the moment the signal for the third shot was given Jerrold was suffering from indigestion. He had gone on to the field intending to wing his adversary and was now undecided whether to kill him or not. Indecision at a critical moment is usually fatal. It delayed Jerrold's shot. At any rate, it was not fired till after he had received the colonel's bullet in his lungs. His struck the earth a few paces before him, he having pulled the trigger of his pistol spasmodically with a bullet in him.

Jerrold's surgeon ran to him. I, not knowing at the time where Jerrold's bullet had gone, advanced toward the colonel to see if he had been hit. He stood motionless, not appearing to be aware of my presence. Noticing the tear in his trousers and lifting the cloth, I made the discovery that Mortimer had cautioned me against bringing to the attention of others.

The leg was of wood. At that moment the sound of galloping horses was heard, and a carriage dashed up to the dueling ground. Out jumped a young man, not more than twenty years old, who at a glance took in the situation, then, rushing up to Colonel Ringold, threw his arms about him.

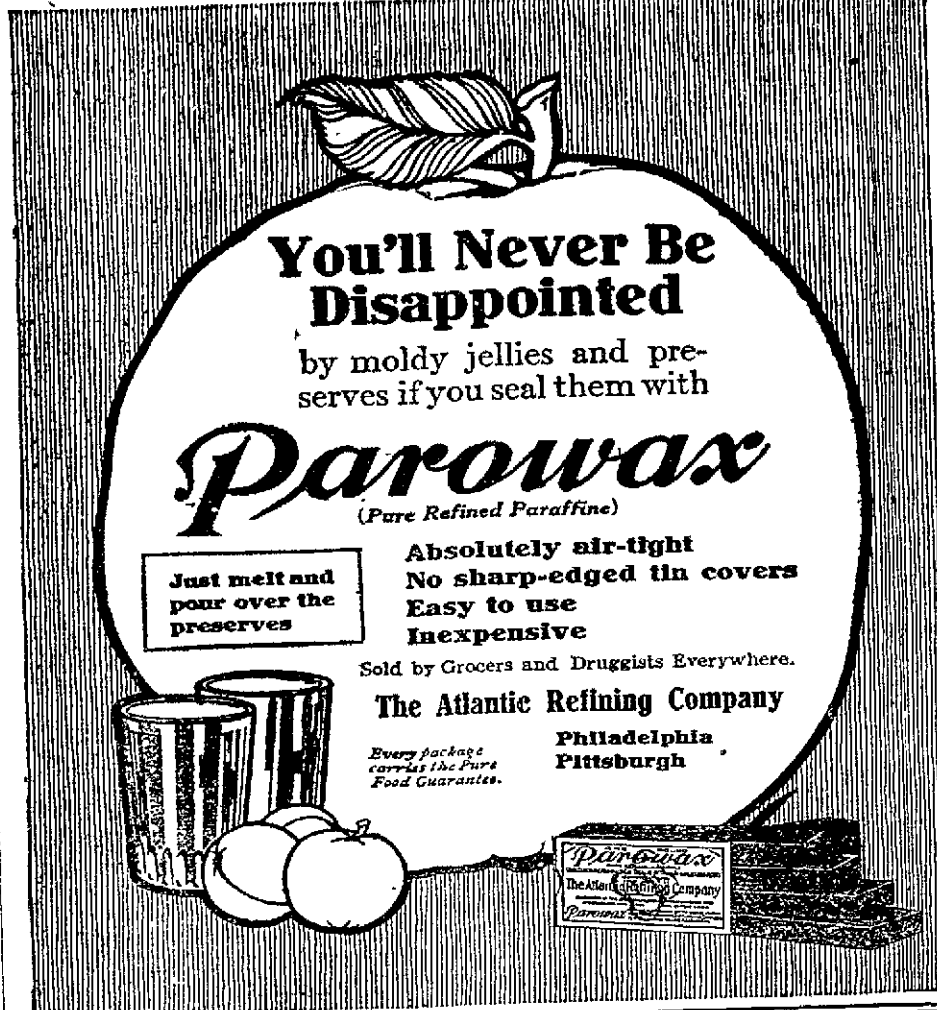

"Oh, father!" he exclaimed. "Why did you do it?"

"Because I didn't wish to lose my boy."

It was a strange scene. Jerrold sitting on the ground, leaning against his second, coughing up blood and looking at the father and son embracing each other. Then doubtless the cause of the insult of the night before was apparent to him. He had insulted the younger Ringold, intending to show his skill in killing him, and was to have fought him on this same morning. But, insulted by the boy's father, whom he did not know, he had put off the duel with the one to accommodate the other.

All was so plain now that the wounded man must have surmised it. But he said nothing. He was taken in his carriage to a hospital, and I was pleased to hear afterward that, after having recovered, the affair had made a changed man of him, and he had resolved never to fight another duel.

Mortimer, by his diplomacy, as he called it, saved the colonel's life. When bearing the colonel's challenge he prevailed upon Jerrold, for Jerrold's own good, to wound the colonel in such a way that he could not continue the fight, for he represented the colonel to be an obstinate and determined man, who, once in a fight, would continue it till he was put hors de combat. Jerrold, having another duel on hand to follow in the wake of the first and fearing to excite antagonism against himself, fell in with the idea. Mortimer suggested that Jerrold, when convinced that his enemy would kill him if he could, should break his leg so that he could not stand upon it to continue the fight, Mortimer knowing that one leg would be advanced and receive the bullet and that that leg was the wooden one. It was a makeshift at best and resulted in Jerrold's disfigurement.

Lesson XIII.—Second Quarter,
For June 30, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Comprehensive Quarterly Review—Golden Text, Matt.
v, 17—Commentary Prepared by Rev.
D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I.—The appearances of the risen Lord, I Cor. xv, 1-11. Golden Text, Acts ii, 32, "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we are all witnesses." Always emphasize the gospel as set forth in this lesson and remember that everything depends on a risen living Christ, the same Jesus who lived on earth as a poor man, now at the right hand of God in the place of all power and still a real man, the Son of Man, waiting for the time to return and bring His kingdom.

LESSON II.—The use of the Sabbath. Mark ii, 23 to iii, 6. Golden Text, Mark ii, 27, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath." Consider the daring pride of man in judging the Lord of the Sabbath for using His own Sabbath, but they knew Him not and judged Him to be a mere man like themselves, yet a great teacher. He made so manifest their hypocrisy and formality and religious pride that they determined to kill Him.

LESSON III.—The appointment of the twelve, Mark iii, 13-19. Golden Text, John xv, 16, R. V., "Ye did not choose me, but I chose you and appointed you, that ye should go and bear fruit." Mark the words, "Unto Him, with Him, that He might send them forth to preach and to have power" (verses 13-15). He Himself is the great and only center, and apart from Him there is no fruit nor service nor anything worth mentioning.

LESSON IV.—The beatitudes, Matt. v, 1-12. Golden Text, Matt. v, 8, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." What a blessed time it will be on the whole earth when the principles of this sermon are lived out! Meanwhile, as heirs of the kingdom, we should manifest these principles in our daily life, true poverty of spirit being the foundation of all, such a self-renunciation that He may be seen in us.

LESSON V.—Poverty and riches, Luke vi, 20-26; xvi, 13-31. Golden Text, Luke xii, 15, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." This is part of a discourse similar to the Sermon on the Mount and illustrated by the story of the rich man and Lazarus. There is no life apart from Christ, and true riches are found only in Him.

LESSON VI.—The law of love, Luke vi, 27-38; Rom. xiii, 8-10. Golden Text, Rom. xiii, 9, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." In I Cor. xiii, we are taught that without love nothing counts, not even giving away all we have, and our bodies to be burned. The only pattern of love is the love of God in Christ, and He expects us to love others as He loves us.

LESSON VII.—The old law and the new life, Matt. v, 17-26. Golden Text, Rom. xiii, 8, R. V., "He that loveth his neighbor hath fulfilled the law." The law of God is holy and just and good, but because it is so perfectly holy no mere man can keep it, and the one thing it does for us is to shut our mouths and bring us all in guilty before God, and then we are ready to receive the righteousness of God as a free gift.

LESSON VIII.—Truthfulness, Matt. v, 33-37; Jas. iii, 1-12; v, 12. Golden Text, Eph. iv, 25, R. V., "Putting away falsehood, speak ye truth each one with his neighbor, for we are members one of another." The tongue is not our chief trouble, but the power back of it, and when it is set on fire of hell it, and when it does give a sample of hell on earth. Let the Prince of Peace, the Lord of Glory, control it, and all will be well.

LESSON IX.—Hypocrisy and sincerity, Matt. vi, 1-18. Golden Text, Matt. vi, 1, R. V., "Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men, to be seen of them, else ye have no reward with your Father who is in heaven." The word to Abraham is still in force, "I am the mighty God, all sufficient, walk before me and be sincere" (Gen. xvii, 1). Not as pleasing men, but God must be our motto (I Thess. ii, 4).

LESSON X.—Hearing and doing, Luke vi, 39-49. Golden Text, Jas. i, 22, "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." All who truly receive Christ are saved fully, freely and forever by His finished work, and that alone, but all such must prove before men the reality of the new life by walking in the good works prepared by God for them (Eph. ii, 10; Tit. iii, 8).

LESSON XI.—Christ's witness to John the Baptist, Matt. xi, 2-19. Golden Text, Luke vii, 23, R. V., "Among them that are born of women there is none greater than John, yet he that is but little in the kingdom of God is greater than he." When the kingdom comes the least in his glorified body shall be greater than John was in his mortal body, and John himself will be greater than ever before.

LESSON XII.—The penitent woman, Luke vii, 36-50. Golden Text, I Tim. i, 15, R. V., "Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." Even such as she was can find a place in His kingdom, but such as self-righteous Simon cannot enter. Behold this woman so occupied with and devoted to Jesus Christ that she is oblivious to all else!

LUMBER AND TIMBER.

We Call Boards or Planks the English Call Deals. Among the differences existing in names of various employments and trades in this country and in England may be mentioned those pertaining to the forest industries. What Americans call a lumber dealer in England is called a timber merchant. Lumber in New England is applied to large enough to cut logs for mill, to the logs entire and to the single sticks into which they are sawed. In the logs are cut into boards, joists, and so on, they form lumber. In the west timber is generally standing trees, and it includes all large and small, without reference to their fitness for the mill. Cutting and hauling of this timber in New England it is logging. In some quarters known as called elsewhere scantling, and Americans call boards or planks English call deals.

This country a person who splits shingles is called a shingle weaver. Shingles are not made in England, but lath are regularly riven. The maker of them is called a lath.

Almost Perfect. "Are you getting along with your penmanship, Bella?" "Oh, yes. I've been at it only six days and I can write 150 words a minute with perfect ease."

Paradox. "What's a paradox?" "When the impossible happens." "We had a paradox here this morning. Ma said you couldn't possibly get home before midnight, yet you had an excuse for staying in."—Pittsburgh Post.

Hated. "I hate your enemies you will find such a vicious habit of mind degrees will break out upon you who are your friends or those indifferent to you."

Encouragement. "Plastic Golfer—Mon, that's the name of your golf I've ever played. You are an Overburdened Caddy—let that discourage ye.—World."

Greatest Kidney Remedy "Earth" Says a Grateful Woman

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

DINNER FOR WEEK-END GUEST.

By Martha McCulloch Williams. To show you still further what is possible with paper bag cooking, I am giving the menu of the latest paper bag cooked dinner that I served to guests. And since all the guests were women, I knew 'hat there was need for me to excel myself. This would make a good menu to serve to the week-end guest.

Menu. Canteloupe a la Vierge. Roast Quail. Sliced Baked Ham. Celery. Salted Nuts. Asparagus with Cheese. Mushrooms. Spiced Apples. Sweet Plum Pickle. Banana Short Cake. Foam Sauce. Claret Punch. Assorted Fruit. Black Coffee.

The quail were stuffed each with a fat raisin, a pinch of seasoned bread crumbs and a dot of butter, then wrapped in the thinnest possible slices of streaky bacon, tied so it could not slip, and the birds put in a well buttered bag and cooked for twenty-five minutes in an oven at first hot, but moderate throughout the last half of the cooking.

The ham I did not bake in a bag. The salted nuts of course had been bag-cooked.

Asparagus came out of cans, since fresh asparagus is not in season. After the quail were cooking, the asparagus was put, points foremost, in a thickly buttered bag, with a dusting of black pepper and a very little salt, also the strained juice of a large lemon and a lump of sweet butter the size of a walnut. It was cooked twelve minutes in moderate heat, taken up in portions and served on hot plates.

The mushrooms were fine, fat and fresh. It was joy to peel them, to nip off the stalks, wipe them delicately with a damp cloth, sprinkle very lightly with salt and drop in a thickly buttered bag along with a lump of extra butter rolled in salted flour and a gill of real cream. After sealing the bag the contents were cooked twelve minutes in a fairly hot oven.

For the banana short cake I first sliced small ripe bananas very thin, added sugar and lemon juice to them, a bare grate of nutmeg and a tablespoonful of sherry. They stood on ice while I made up the paste. It required half a cup of well-creamed butter, one cup sugar, two well-beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of baking powder and a pinch of salt, both sifted well through a pint of flour, and a teaspoonful of vanilla. It was mixed as lightly as possible, rolled out less than half an inch thick and cut into rounds about four inches across. These were brushed over with melted butter, laid one on another and baked inside a buttered bag laid flat upon a trivet. The cooking took a little more than twelve minutes. The rounds when they came out were separated, a little butter laid upon the soft top of the bottom one, then the prepared bananas in a thick layer, after which the top was clapped on.

The foam sauce was double-flavored. Its foundation was fresh butter creamed with twice its bulk of sugar and softened by beating in gradually half a gill of boiling water. Alternately with the water, there was added hot lemon juice, the beating being fast and furious as it went in. Then a teaspoonful of vanilla was beaten through the white of an egg, until the white was as stiff as possible, and the mixture stirred lightly into the butter and sugar.

SWEETBREAD RECIPES.

By Nicolas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London. Escalop of Sweetbreads: Trim a sweetbread and cut in four pieces. Trim four large mushrooms and tomatoes. Roll the sweetbread in flour and put it between the mushrooms and tomatoes. Butter well your paper bag and arrange the above nicely in the middle. Place one teaspoonful of breadcrumbs on top. Cover with a slice of fat bacon or ham cut very thin. Flavor with sweet herbs as desired. Seal bag and put on broiler in hot oven. Allow twenty to twenty-five minutes.

Sweetbread (Fancy Method): Half a small onion, one slice of carrot, a little ham, fat and lean, and a little of the trimmings, all cut in small dice. A small bunch of sweet herbs and thyme, parsley and bay leaves. Put these on the bottom of the paper bag which should be well buttered. Lard your sweetbread, if desired, and around it put three or four mushrooms and two or three tomatoes, skinned and all seed removed. Add a tablespoonful of stock, Madeira or sherry, according to taste. Seal bag. Put on broiler. Allow twenty-five minutes in a hot oven.

If color and thick sauce are desired mix a quarter of a teaspoonful of arrow root with the vegetables and a little burnt sugar coloring. When you open the bag, remove the sweetbread gently. Place on dish. Remove tomatoes, mushrooms, etc., and place around it. Put the whole of the remaining contents of the bag, juice included, in a strainer and press with a wooden spoon into a clean hot basin standing in boiling water. Pour the gravy thus obtained over the sweetbread.

FLED FROM HIS BRIDE.

Romantic Story of the Marriage of General Sam Houston.

In "As I Remember—Recollections of American Society During the Nineteenth Century," is a romantic story of General Sam Houston, whose "appearance was patrician and courtesy that of the inborn gentleman."

"I have spoken of General Houston's appearance. I now wish to refer to his fine sense of honor. He was married on Jan. 22, 1829, to Miss Eliza Allen and separated from her directly after the marriage ceremony in, it is said, the most painful circumstances. The wedding guests had departed and General Houston and his bride were sitting alone by the fire when he suddenly discovered that she was weeping. He asked the cause of her tears and was told that she never loved him and never could, but had married him solely to please her father.

"I love Dr. Douglas," she added, 'but I will try my best to be a dutiful wife to you.'

"Miss," said General Houston, even waiving the fact that he had just married her, 'no white woman shall be my slave. Good night!'

"It is said that he mounted his horse and rode to Nashville, where he resigned at once his office as governor and departed for the Cherokee country, where and elsewhere his subsequent career is well known. Having procured a divorce from his wife, he married Margaret Moffette in the spring of 1840."

How New York's Grill Room Prices Hit the Blue Grass Brother.

After his brother had been in New York a little more than a year a Kentuckian decided to pay him a visit. Hoping to surprise his brother, the Kentuckian did not apprise his brother of his intentions. Arriving at 9 o'clock in the morning, he asked to be directed to a good eating house. The taxicab pilot steered his course for the largest, costliest and most fashionable hotel grill room on Broadway.

Being a stranger in a strange land and hungry, the Blue Grass brother ordered a regular home meal. When he got the check from the waiter its size staggered him. He wasn't accustomed to New York hotel prices.

After verifying the correctness of his bill at the cashier's desk and being insulted by the waiter for tipping him 25 cents, the visitor started out to look for his brother, whose office he found about 1 o'clock.

In response to his inquiry as to his brother's whereabouts a clerk said: "He's over eating at the Blank hotel's new grill room."

"Go slow, friend. Only a millionaire could overeat at the Blank hotel. I know, because I had breakfast there myself this morning."—Louisville Times.

From Jail to the Bench.

Francis Pemberton (1825-97) was imprisoned in the Fleet for debts contracted during a period of youthful extravagance. While in jail he applied himself to the study of law and came to be regarded as a kind of legal oracle by his fellow prisoners, who nicknamed him "counselor." With the fees they gave him for legal advice he bought books to continue his studies. He then prevailed upon his creditors to grant his release from prison that he might the sooner earn money to pay off his debts. Called to the bar in 1854, after a brilliant career in the palace court at Westminster and subsequently in the house of lords, he became a puisne judge. He was knighted in 1875 and ultimately, on the dismissal of Scroggs, was made lord chief justice in 1881.—London Standard.

Mystery of the Pyramids.

One of the mysteries of the great pyramids in Egypt is how they were built in the sand. How did the slaves lift these gigantic boulders into place, especially since that was in the days when machines were unknown. Savants and historians believe sloping ways were built leading to the pyramids and the great stones hauled into place.

"Suffered day and night the torment of itching piles. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Ointment. The result was lasting."—Hon. John R. Garrett, Mayor, Girard, Ala.

Tobacco Raising in Ireland.

Irish tobacco and Irish cigars and cigarettes are bought in Dublin with patriotic pride and smoked with enjoyment, and it may be only a matter of time when Irish cigarettes will be known the smoking world over. The raising of tobacco in Ireland is one of the new industries which are being undertaken and the quality is pronounced good.

THE OLD TIME DOMINIQUE.

The old American "Dominicker" had licked the English Dorking long before Lexington and Concord and his clarion crow joined in the general jubilation July 4, 1776.

Some claim this oldest American breed was brought from the Isle of Dominica. Others declare it the result of a cross of White Dorking and a black breed. But the majority of hen historians believe the Dominique was originated by Dutch settlers who founded New Holland.

When the Romans left home they carried their household gods (penates) along. When the Hollanders left their country of dikes and ducks they brought to Manhattan some penciled Dutch Hamburg roosters, which they mated with native white and black fowls, and thus evolved the Dominique.

The relation between those early Hamburgs and early Dominiques is easily traced by their resemblance in comb, shape and plumage.

The early Dominiques were shaped much like the Hamburg, but larger. They were longer and stronger of wing than the Barred Plymouth Rock, but did not resemble the Rocks so closely in color and shape as they do today.

The real Dominique is much like the Leghorn in style, is longer in back than the Wyandotte, but resembles it in full, round breast and juicy, compact, yellow tinged carcass.

The Dominique fights like a gamecock. The hen is a fine mother. The breed is "tough as nails," cold having little effect on them. They are great rangers, hustle all day for feed, and few surpass them for winter eggs.

Their prolific laying brought them into such prominence that this breed and the Black Java were selected for crossing to produce an ideal utility fowl, and the result, the Barred Plymouth Rock, is surely a wonder.

Thus if the old "Dominicker" has been neglected and passed by in the mad rush for rooster novelties its virtues are perpetuated in the Barred Rock, America's most famous and popular fowl to date.

Habit That Should Be Checked.
Twisting the mouth when talking is a habit pure and simple and one that you can overcome if you exercise sufficient will power. This habit makes more lines than age. Talk before a mirror and you will understand why so many lines are forming. A little piece of court plaster placed each side of the mouth will act as a constant reminder, until you have broken yourself of the habit.

Should Have Heeded Ill Omen.
The wisest of us have our pet superstitions, one or more. The great house of Rothschild has unwritten canons on the subject. The head of the firm, if he met a pig on his way to the office, would not conclude any financial transaction on that day. On one occasion he determined to rise above his weakness, and, after meeting his omen, he arranged a large loan, by which the firm lost over a million sterling.

Intermarriage in Brittany.

In accordance with the custom which has made the picturesque province of Brittany famous, twenty-six couples were married at once, at Plougastel, one recent morning. In the village there are only some eight or nine family names, and the village folk never marry outside of their community. Last year there were forty-two marriages.

Cheerful Philosopher.

Fontenelle, the French writer, was always cheerful, and this is perhaps why he lived to be one hundred years old. He used to say: "Without cheerfulness, what is philosophy worth?" When about to die, he said: "I do not suffer, my friend; I only feel a certain difficulty in living."

Wall of the Psalmist.

On the whole, and with recognition of size as a determining factor, the choice appears to lie between a short life and a merry one, or linked dullness long drawn out. If you whirl about singing and dancing and improving each shining minute of the shining hour, like skylarks and nightingales, you die of senility at the age of eight. But a creature like a tortoise, that can sit and do nothing for days on end save wink its eye once, may watch the rise and fall of dynasties, and feel no older at the end of it.—Exchange.

Mistrusted Santa Claus.

As Christmas time drew near Bobby expressed a wish for some specially desired article. His mother suggested that he write to Santa Claus about it. "Mother," said the child, after some hesitation, "I—I think everything of Santa, an' I know how good he is an' everthing, but, mother, he's so awful busy that he forgets, sometimes! Last year, you 'member, I asked him for a toy goat an' he sent me four dogs. I wish you'd look after this one thing yourself!"

Titled Men Chased Indians.

Many Oxford and Cambridge men in quest of the romantic enlisted in the Royal Northwest Mounted Police of Canada. Many dukes, earls and barons also look with pride to the days when they chased Indians and cattle thieves over the Canadian plains. These men for many years preserved the law and order in the wildest parts of Canada.
